N.B. Grits Win Again With Smaller Majority

FREDERICTON (CP)-Premier Louis J. Robichaud's Liberal government won re-election in New Brunswick's general election Monday, but its majority in the legislature slipped to six today as late counting showed a Progressive Conservative elected in a seat which had been left in doubt.

The third straight election win for the Liberals under the 42-year-old Acadian premier included the personal defeat of fiery Charlie Van Horne in his bid as the new provincial Conservative leader.

"I think New Brunswick has seen the last of him," the premier said of Mr. Van Horne, a former member of Parliament and one of the most flamboyant the straight of the province in Restitute to him to speak, said he was "extremely happy" with the outcome. He would rest three or the job of doing "my best for the people of the province."

After a campaign in which he stressed the need for responsibility, Mr. Robichaud said the voters who defeated Mr. Van Horne in Restitouche "voted for him to speak, said he was "extremely happy" with the outcome. He would rest three or the job of doing "my best for the people of the province."

B.C. Fun-Seekers Mostly Stay-at-Homes

When a typical British Columbian takes a holiday trip of a week or longer, there's one place above all others he is

British Columbia. He's Canada's biggest holiday stay-at-home, according to a survey of holiday travel habits.

And of all Canadians, he is most likely to take a bus or a ship on his holiday and least likely to take a train. He's twice as likely as the average to go to Britain, one third less likely to visit the U.S. and a little below average on visiting other Canadian provinces.

The figures are found in a survey carried out by the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers' Association in its massive annual Canadian Consumer Survey for 1966.

The sample used was 16,000 households in 79 Canadian cities, Including 300 families from Victoria, 500 from Vancourer and 2000 from B.C. couver and 2,289 from B.C.

Another survey by the Canadian Government Travel Bureau shows that almost half of B.C.'s non-resident visitors are from Alberta and another third from the other Prairie average, 39, and the Prairies and Quebec were tied at a low B.C. matched the national average for use of automobiles on holidays—74 per cent on trips by car. Victoria, for fairly obvious reasons, showed less tendency—67 per cent to use autos but more of them used airplanes—17 per cent ompared with the province's 13 per cent and the country's 14 per cent. Here's how B.C. compared with the national average in several categories:

Bus travel, one half higher; ship, twice as high; train, one-third lower; visits to Continental Europe, one-third lower; to other provinces, one-fifth lower.

Victoria tripled the national average for visits to Mexico and use of ship travel. B.C. as a whole drew a blank on visits enough trips in the "other" category—presumably including. Asia—to be worth tabulating. B.C. had 1 per cent "other."

Quebecers led the way to Europe by a healthy margin (twice the average of any other region) and also proved the most American-oriented holidayers with an average of 38 per cent compared with the national 26 per cent. B.C.'s was Averages in individual cities show that Prince George, Prince Rupert and Trail are at the top of the list in per-centage of families interviewed who actually took holiday trips. They registered in the mid-80 per cent range while the national average was 69. Victoria was a bit above the average with 71 per cent reporting they had holiday trips of at least a week.

Prince Rupert almost doubled the national average for air travel at 24 per cent but was topped by Sydney, N.S., at 29 and St. John's Nfld., at 26.

Calgary led all cities in visiting other provinces—54 per cent did it to dwarf the national average of 22 per cent. Victoria's figure was 14 per cent and B.C.'s, 18 per cent.

Uncontrollable Controls

PREMIER BENNETT'S CALL TO Ottawa for a compulsory system of wage and price controls to fight inflation is a surprising volte face. The politics of the move is obvious, but at least he appears to have reached a sharper awareness of the fact that an over-rapid expansion of the economy-such as his administration has promoted in British Columbia-carries in its train certain inexorable effects of which the most outstanding are strong upward pressures on the costs of labor and materials.

The premier's agitation over inflationary pressures is understandable since they threaten the financial success of British Columbia's vast hydro-electric ventures and other areas of the province's economy. But there is no body of evidence to suggest that a compulsory incomes policy would work in Canada and a considerable amount of study suggests that it would not.

It is just a year ago since the Economic Council of Canada published its comprehensive findings on this subject with the conclusion that this country "is very far indeed from being a favorable environment" for compulsory wage and price controls. Indeed, as Mr. Bennett well knows, the federal government has not the power to institute such controls and could only obtain it constitutionally in a period of great national emergency such as a war.

Beyond this barrier, however, is the question of whether incomes policies work and the thorough study by the Economic Council indicates that they have at best only a modest effect on price performances. Even at that, the Council report states, "it is difficult to say how great this effect has been over all, how long it has lasted and whether in the end, all things considered, the initiative has been worthwhile."

raeli destroyer renders critical

Wage and price controls, as the Council pointed out, have a "novelty and sweep" which may be more appealing to some people than the hard and unglamorous drudgery of getting down to the basic causes underlying inflationary pressures. In fact, the Council stated, reliance on an incomes policy "ignores what is perhaps the greatest danger . . that it will absorb attention and effort which ought to be going into other policy initiatives." Further: , the basic problem to be attacked is difficult and deep-seated. Nothing in the experience of Canada or any other industrial country suggests that there is some simple formula or over-all prescription which will get rid of it quickly."

There is no doubt that the main body of public opinion in Canadawage and salary earners, business and industry-would oppose the imposition of a compulsory incomes policy in the absence of a great national cause such as a patrioticallysupported war. It is possible that set of voluntary "guidelines" might find backing if there were clear evidence that the basic problems of the economy were being set to rights on a national basis and with the full co-operation of all levels of government, industry and

Down-Grading the Value of the Bombs

POWERFUL impetus for a treaty ban expensive anti-ballistic missile (ABM) on the spread of nuclear weapons is seen here in a study, issued today by the United Nations, of the role of the Abomb in modern military science and diplomacy. The 101page report, drafted nuclear · experts from 12 countries on both sides of the Iron Curtain, concludes:

• That the practical, usable military advantage derived

Frve from possessing nuclear weapons greatly exaggerated, and in certain condions may be non-existant.

• That such weapons may not even enhance the diplomatic influence a country can exert, when counter measures available to an adversary are taken into consideration.

• That prestige deriving from membership in the "Atomic Club" is ephemeral and a "mixed blessing"

• And that the A-bomb and H-bomb are so costly to make and deliver on target that only seven countries - West Germany, India, Canada, Italy, Poland Sweden and the Netherlands - could build a "small, high-quality force" without more than doubling their present defence expenditures.

The report thus raises, and challenges, most of the principal arguments advanced for building a nuclear arsenal. Whether countries on the threshold of the nuclear "club" will be persuaded remains to be seen. If they buy the UN's thesis, there will be a powerful motive for them to join in signing a non-proliferation treaty. India, Italy, West Germany and Japan, among others, have been resisting such a treaty. A Soviet-American draft is under negotiation at Geneva.

Original Plan

As originally suggested in May, 1966, by UN Secretary-General U Thant, the was to have been an expose of the terrifying effects of nuclear explosions. Thant argued that such an expose would spur disarmament.

'Ban-the-bomb' advocates quickly embraced the idea. The United States and other Western countries at first sought to sidetrack it, and failing this, set out to broaden the study into a wideranging analysis of the military, economic, and security implications of comb

The final result is a compromise. It includes a nerve-jarring chapter on the devastation predictable from A and Hbomb usage. This chapter could frighten some people, observers believe, intobacking prohibition of the use of the - a Soviet propaganda "war-

"there is no active defence system in sight" which could provide total safety.

The principal impact of the report, however, is its argument that nuclear weapons abysmally flunk any rational 'cost-effectiveness' test. If both sides in a war possess them, the report contends it is highly debatable whether there are any circumstances of land warfare in which such weapons could be used as battlefield weapons or, if they were so used, would confer any military advantage to either side in the zone of contact.'

Devastation from an exchange would be so great that neither army could exploit the results, it argues Without naming the United States, it says American nuclear weapons failed to deter North Korea and North Vietnam from going to war. Moreover, nuclearweapons "deployment in the theatre of operations" did not make "the course of conventional war any easier," the UN experts add.

Washington has never publicly stated that it has deployed A-weapons in the area of Vietnam, or that it did so in Korea in 1950-1953. As for political leverage on an adversary-India against Pakistan, for example-acquisition of nuclear weapons is more likely to spur the other party to make new alliances, as with Red China, the report contends, again without naming the countries it has in mind.

Spending huge sums to build and deliver a bomb-it costs at least 1.7 billion dollars for even a "modest" nuclear capacity- could risk a ruler's "internal security" by provoking popular discontent among people who want food and education instead, it says.

Nuclear weapons production is a bit like taking psychedelic drugs, the UN experts indicate. No number of bombs ever satisfies; a country always has to build more, and in addition gets involved in ever more sophisticated (and hence ever more expensive) delivery systems.

The net message is: "Don't get hooked." It pounds this message home with such force that the report is likely to stir demurrers in the Pentagon, which has never voiced the opinion that tactical nuclear weapons confer no advantage.

The 12 experts operated as individuals, but are known to have had general guidance from their respective governments. The fact that an Indian expert, chairman of his country's Atomic Energy Commission, signed the report is considered encouraging by advocates of a non-proliferation treaty.

The American expert was Prof. John G. Palfrey of Columbia University, a former member of the United States Atomic Energy Commission. Other countries represented were the Soviet Union, Britain, France, Canada, Japan, Sweden, Norway, Poland, Mexico and Nigeria.

Pearson On Quebec

an important statement to the Bauff Conference on the Economics of Canadian Unity, Prime Minister Pearson has taken the process a step further. He brushed aside such catch phrases as "two nations," "particular status" and 'special status' on the ground that these phrases have to be defined to be meaningful.

The Pearson analysis isolates three separate issues:

• In linguistic, cultural and social terms, there are two nations. English Canada must recognize this fact and must pursue policies which will allow the French-speaking cultural society full

 In terms of regional development, there are great variations and conflicts of interest within Canada. This applies especially to Quebec but also, with almost as much force, to the Atlantic provinces and to the West, Special regional needs have always been taken into account in framing federal policy and must continue to be given full

. In constitutional terms, it is not possible to make too great a difference between the position of Quebec and that of other provinces without risking the rise of a separate state that "would shatter the hopes and dreams of millions of Canadians"

It is on this third question - the question also emphasized by Mr. Trudeau — that a major battle is still to be fought between Ottawa and Quebec

Exposing Sham

The British Lawn Tennis Federation has done the world of sports a great service by challenging the international rules cody on the issue of shamateurism. The British have scrapped all distinct between professionals and amateurs for next year's prestigious Wimbledon tournament. The Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, which is on record as supporting open tournaments, should back the British. The major tennis countries of the world, including Australia, the United States and France, have also supported open tournaments in the past. Shamateurism is a disgrace to any sport and it is no secret that many top-'amateur'' tennis players are, in effect, well paid for their efforts.

All Negotiable

There are now no longer any constitutional subjects which can be declared axiomatically beyond the bounds of discussion." In other words, everything, including the Canadian federation, is now negotiable, a point of view to which this newspsper subscribes. For, as the minister (Mr. Sauve) said;

"The issue is survival. Survival of Canada as a country and the survival of the culture of French Canada."

The savings in autumn travel in the west are worth a lot of considering in vacation planning. In Banff, for example, a room that rented for $20 a night during the summer can be had in the fall for $10 or $12. In the Okanagan Valley the rates have been cut from around $14 to around $9.

An even deeper cut has been made in the halfway house at the Rogers Pass. In It could also stir demands for the summer it charges up to $18 a day.

each other with advertising gimmicks. The quality of the food served in the west has not improved much, even as it too has risen steadily in price. By all accounts, there was more room at the inns across the Prairies last summer than in previous years. The people catering to tourists blamed the slack season on Expo and the Pan-Am Games in Winnipeg. In Saskatchewan and Alberta, incidentally, many more people made the long jump to Expo, and by car, than took the shorter jaunt to innipeg for the athletic contests.

Now the traffic is mainly in the opposite direction. With another good crop in the bins, the farmers of Saskatchewan are on their annual mass exodus to the Pacific Coast. They are being joined, this year, by more and more cars from Manitoba, With the new, shorter and more spectacularly scenic route new open through the Crows Nest Pass to Vancouver, the yellow and black Manitota and Saskatchewan licence plates are surprisingly numerous along the northern routes.

To motoring Canadians who have battled highway traffic all summer, the lack of congestion on the roads this fall is almost unbelievable. Traffic can back up on itself near construction, through respect to power for . the mountains, or on narrow stretches of tramcar and electric highways near cities. But everywhere else it is simply a matter of driving as fast as you want to go in any direction you choose.

Fewer Trailers

Two or three factors are involved. There is the sharp drop in trailer hauling which is becoming an increasingly vexing problem in the west every year. The big trucks are now travelling at regular highway speeds. In Alberta, for example, the highways are all posted at 50 miles per hour for truck traffic.

Long haul drivers who obeyed the law always collected convoys behind them on the narrow stretches and hills. The highway signs still stipulate 50 miles an hour, but nobody pays any attention any more. The trucks travel at 65 like everyone else, and they are undoubtedly less of a hazard at that speed than they were going slower.

Alberta seems to be moving steadily now toward the no-limit system as far as Meal prices, unlike room rents have speed regulation is concerned. It has not come down. Nor has the price of upped the limit on its main divided gasoline, which has been going up slowly, highway to 70 miles an hour. The but steadily as the oil companies battle highway, at this limit, has been remarkably free of accidents. On the other hand, a 15-mile stretch south of Edmonton city limits has been a death trap, even with a 50-mile top speed.

From random observation on both roads this conclusion seems tenable: exceeders of the speed limit on the 50mile roads outnumber those on 70-mile stretches by at least 10 to 1.

Remaining Hazards

For the fall vacationer, speed limits are important only because congestion and the hazards created by overtaking and passing are eliminated. Other hazards of motor touring, however, still prevail.

The most vexing problem for strangers in the west is in getting lost trying to find their way into and around the cities. The problem is particularly acute after dark. The western cities, except Winnipeg, are niggardly with direction signs. Winnipeg plasters them all over the place; but no stranger can find his way around in Winnipeg without a map that will clue him in on the signs. You can follow the numbers easily in Winnipeg, but not even the natives know what halt the route numbers mean.

In Edmonton, getting in and out of town atter dark is like penetrating the Iron Curtain. In Calgary, the lit-up downtown buildings are visible from far off. In Edmonton, the far-off lights turn out to be oil refineries on the other side of the city. Direction signs to the city centres are almost non-existent.

Legal Safeguards Hard to Establish

If you could no longer tolerate your life, and wanted a doctor to praceuthanasia, would you go about it?

Advocates of euthanasia propose a procedure which includes conditions and safeguards: the patient being of age and of sound mind, must sign a written application form for his life to be ended.

This must be approved by two doctors—the one in charge of the case, and the "medical referee" for the district.

Their duty is to satisfy themselves that the illness is painful and incurable. The actual killer, to put it bluntly, would normally be the former of the two doctors. But what is the criterion of

The torturers in Orwell's "1984" had a machine for measuring pain, but nobody has invented one in reality. The doctor can go by observation, but he may be wrong; he isn't feeling the pain himself.

In any case, it is scarcely pleasant to think of someone asking for euthanasia and being refused because his pain is short of the mark.

Subjective

Or the doctor can go by what the patient says. This is necessarily subjective, and it will be untrue when the patient exaggerates his pain because he is tired of life for other reasons. One may believe that this patient has a but this makes nonsense of

Dr. A. N. Exton-Smith, in a survey in 1960 of 220 mortally ill patients, found that 30 suffered from moderate or severe pain, including eight of the 33 cancer cases. But what I regard as severe pain may be moderate to the man in the next bed, and my "moderate pain" may not be worth mentioning to him.

The standard adopted in this and other studies is "pain which cannot be controlled by drugs of the aspirin group The control, clearly, is as difficult to ascertain as the original pain. My own experience in hospiwas that everyone who of pain got panadol and this was assumed quite wrongly in some cases -to achieve control.

Do the stronger drugs conpain? The answer is subject to the same caution but doctors are pretty confi-

A doctor in charge of a large geriatric unit, who uses heroin quite freely, told me that he could recall only two in out of 900 who had been n his care. Dr. Cicely Saunders, who has done outstanding work at St. Joseph's in Hackney, England, writes: able to control pain in terminal

Not at Home

However, these are hospital experiences, and matters are different at home. As Dr. Exton-Smith points out: "Con-trol is only achieved if the patients are under constant supervision, which is a counsel of perfection to the busy general practitioner or district

Another factor, too, is involved. It is referred to sometimes as "discomfort" and sometimes as "distress." If you have cancer of the throat and have to live with a tube in it, so that breathing and eating are a struggle and you never get a good night's sleep, "discomfort" is both inevitable and constant. Exactly when it becomes pain is a semantic question.

Probably, in trying to measuring the capacity endure pain. The pain that is endured with difficulty is felt most strongly, even in a directly physical sense. The mind, in this region, has an incalculable influence on the body, and it is impossible to separate pain from anxiety.

It is a common finding that old people dying of cancer feel less pain than young people at what is, pathologically, the same stage of the disease former are resigned, while the latter are fighting for life. A patient surrounded by relatives in evident dis-tress, or worried about the future of his wife and children, is always in greater

Thus, when patients say that they cannot bear their sufferings and want to die, this may or may not be an argument for euthanasia, but it is certainly an argument for social measures (in the broadest sense) to make dying a less anxious process. People who die in hospitals or units set aside for terminal illnesses, where care and comfort are prime considera-tions, usually die without pain. Those who die in busy and understaffed general wards, where attention is concen-trated on patients who are going to recover, risk greater anguish of body and mind.

As for those who die at home, the situation will vary according to their family science of society should be uneasy about them until - for instance - it is possible to get full nursing care for them.

First Question

I turn now to the require-ment that the disease must be incurable. We assume that a patient, unless he has other motives, will not ask for euthanasia unless all hope of recovery is gone, and this is the first question he will put to the doctor. It is on this point that doctors feel the greatest burden of the proposal, and are most uneasy

As one of them said to me: 'If you allow that one doctor in a hundred is incompetent, or hasn't kept up with modern knowledge and new forms of therapy — and that's a modest estimate — you can work out how many people are going to be killed unnecessarily.

We are now curing some cancers that would have been fatal a generation ago. By a nation of methods, it will at some point be possible to cure a majority instead of a minority of cancer cases.

Thus, it is going to become increasingly difficult for a doctor to say that a patient is or is not incurably ill.

When we bring pain and incurability together, things get still more complex. Except for certain types of cancer, the worst pain arises from conditions that are not fatal and that have to be endured for years until death comes from some

An Exception

The doctor who cited the 900 cases of controlled pain made an exception for bedsores. One case of suffering listed in a pamphle: published by the Euthanasia Society Voluntary Plan for British Euthanasia" - is of dermatitis with intolerable itching.

Dr. Exton-Smith cites woman of 64 who had had rheumatoid arthritis for eight then develop paraplegia; for the last 18 months of her life, severe pain defied morphine, pethadine, and other potent drugs.

They were ineffective, too. in the case of a man in agony after an amputation for gangrene. For months, he often asked "to be done away with." But he could not have qualified for euthanasia.

True, one might interpret "incurable" to mean "irreversible" rather than "fatal". An athlete stricken by spinal paralysis and likely to spend his life in a wheelchair might ask for death; so might a painter who went blind.

But, apart from the possiadvances, there is no telling whether they could not ulti-mately find value and enjoyment in life.

What, then, of the state of mind of the patient who asks for death?

He may be making a rational and well-based decision; but he may be impelled by a despair and anxiety that could prove temporary. The farther in time he is from natura! death, the greater the uncertainty.

It is somewhat gruesome to think of a patient requesting euthanesia, refusing it when the time comes renewing his request, and leaving the doctor in doubt whether the embracing of death or the clinging to life is the less rational mood. But these alternations of despair and euphoria are common among the gravely ill.

Depressed

Doctors say that patients who ask for death are usually suffering from depression. They use this term, not in its everyday sense, but to indicate a definite medical or psychological condition which can be treated by drugs or by electro-consulsive therapy.

Thus, the condition that the mind" is not so simple as it mind is the common outcome of weakness, of old age, of pain, and of the heavy sedation that is the only alternative to pain. Indeed, the lives that are most definitely not worth sadly numerous in our geri-atric wards and mental hospitals-from senile dementia larger number who are more less/ "wandering" or ga." They are incurable, and they may well be in greater pair, than cancer cases, so far as mental pain can be measured against physical.

But, once we include them among candidates for death at doctor's hands, we have taken the dangerous step from voluntary to compulsory euthonasia. Warned by the Nazi crime of extermination of the insane, the Euthanasia Society insists that its plan stops short of that divide Another problem - though again, the society makes plain that it will have nothing to do with this—is posed by babies who, so far as we now know, will never live a normal life. Recent advances in surgery offer some hope to the fortunates, but a number of hopeless cases with gross multiple deformities enter the world every year. If they die, as they generally do fairly

soon, doctors agree that it is

Many doctors would wish to regard German measles in pregnancy as good grounds for abortion. Yet the same d ctors would recoil from con pulsory euthanasia once a human being, even a parody of a human being, is in their

Ar age limit for euthanasia is essential to preserve the voluntary principle and considered choice. However, brings difficulties. A child dying of leukemia has perhaps as much right to a curtailment of slow decline as an old man with cancer. One doctor described the death from cancer of an attractive girl of 20 as his most harrowing experience. The not on of her waiting for her 21st birthday to qualify death is far from pleasant; yet, wherever the line is drawn, it is bound to be

Yet nature provides a solution to many a doctor's dilemma. The deformed babies contract infections: the old and bedridden are prone to pneumonia and heart failure. It is the doctor, with his declared duty to prolong lite and his unprecedented power to do so, who creates the conditions for the vain appeal for death. I was not surprised to hear a distinguished member of the profession say that what oung doctors most need is a Several doctors have told me occasions when they stained from a cure that was at their disposal—once in the case of a child whose brain had been irretrievably damaged in an accident and who then developed an infection, patients with terminal cancer or senile dementia met with a merciful pneumonia.

Objections

Objections come readily to mind. The doctor is tacitly interpreting the patient's wishes, not explicitly consulting them. He has to await a chance which may not be forthcoming. He can be frustrated by vigilant relatives, or in hospital by other doctors or nurses with a different out-

In any case, he is choosing between life and death on nonmedical grounds, influenced by the patient's age and other circumstances, and making an essentially moral judgment. The logic of not treating is also the logic of euthanasia.

But public opinion, including Catholic opinion, has accepted the intensive use of drugs to relieve pain even with the likelihood of shortening life. We are probably ready to accept a more regular and admitted practice of abstention from treatment.

So far as the law is concerned, all that is needed is a short act—perhaps only an understanding or conven-tion—to the effect that a doctor will not be prosecuted in consequence of a patient's death unless he can be accused of acting from malice or the desire for gain.

The doctor would then be able, without assuming the positive role of the killer, to see a life to an end in a way most of his colleagues be asked of him on behalf of the sufferer is, in essence, what Kent asked on behalf of

Official Version Of Vietnam War Mostly Gibberish

It is no one's fault that th result is gibberish. Not the briefers. Not the journalists. The trouble is that in South Vietnam there is very little that is knowable, nothing that is verifiable.

It is ludicrous that magazine can report (as it did some weeks ago) that the personal following of militant Buddhist leader Thich Tri Quang is "down" to 875,000 from "an estimated" three million.

No one knows those figures. including Tri Quang himself. There is no census in South Vietnam—no reliable census or Buddhists and certainly no realistic estimate of the followers of Tri Quang

The Americans do not even know the population of the country to the nearest half million Vietnamese. Anyone who has watched a body count knows that it is invariably in error, one way or the other. It is not that the intention is to mislead, it is that an accurate body count after a heavy fire fight is impossible; the soldiers in the field know this, which is why body counts are not taken seriously in South Vietnam It is plausible that the kill ratio of allied to enemy troops is even higher than the American command says it is. No one knows the effect of the artillery and air strikes. Equally, it may be lower. It is not possible to tell. The problem of verification in South Vietnam is illustrated by an incident that took place near Hoai An, Quang Nan province, some months ago. A Marine platoon moving through a village encountered a group of Vietnamese soldiers. They waved, and passed on.

As the last of the Marines passed the last of the Vietn a m e s e , the Vietnamese turned and fired, killing (it is my recollection) all but one of the Americans.
The immediate assumption was that the soldiers were Viet Cong, dressed in the n uniforms of the regular tion revealed another possibility. Not long before the attack, a Vietnamese village had been mistakenly bombed by American aircraft, causing heavy loss of life.

One of the Vietnamese investigating the Hoai An incident theorized that the Vietnamese may have been ARVN, who hit the Americans as an act of revenge. It was therefore to the ARVN interest to pretend they were

How do you tell when a hamlet is no longer in the control of the enemy? When the Saigon-appointed chief sleeps in the village? When the population informs on the Viet Cong? When the American cadre advisor can walk through it unarmed? Or, as the Vietnamese would have it, when "envy and hatred" are

Some hamlets have met all of these criteria (except the last which is generally re-garded as a might idealistic for South Vietnam now) and yet revert instantly to Viet Cong control when the ARVN battalion is pulled out (and it is impossible to supply a bat-talion for every village in South Vietnam).

Cadillac for 1968 elegance in action

The master builder of the V-8's introduces the fourth great V-8 engine design in motoring history.

Here's what it means to the man at the wheel:

For once, automotive critics agree. Almost without exception, they're enthusiastic about the 1968 Cadillacs, most recent example of Cadillac's consistent engineering leadership.

And the praise for Cadillac's entirely new 472 V-8 engine is especially extravagant. It is unquestionably the largest, smoothest engine ever put into a production passenger car. Its quiet operation is remarkable, its response in traffic surprising, its stamina on the turnpike truly amazing!

The totally redesigned 472 V-8 (only four components are the same as in '67) meets all of the demands of today's driving. The torque, or usable power, surpasses that of any other passenger car engine.

This unmatched combination of performance and smoothness is in no way compromised by the operation of Cadillac's usual conveniences. Even air conditioning, which exerts an appreciable load on some engines, is handled with ease by the new 472.

The debut of the completely new 472 V-8 engine marks the fourth time Cadillac has led the industry with a major V-8 engine development. The first time was in 1914, when the first V-8 that could be reproduced in quantity was lowered onto a Cadillac chassis.

Each of the eleven brilliantly new Cadillac models for 1968 is equipped with the celebrated 472 V-8. If you'd like to get in on the celebration, test-drive one soon. Then you'll know what elegance in action really means Your authorized Cadillac dealer will be pleased to assist you in this exciting discovery. See him soon!

But last week there was Conny spilling out through the tube, old armor face, with that "by cracky, you'd better believe it" smoke pouring out of his throat.

This was Telescope, a half-hour biography. It proved that CBC can stand for Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, not Confused Balderdash Compounded

The Corporation tried a new technique. It shut up. The guest was allowed to meander at his own comfortable stride down nostalgia avenue. If he topic-jumped so much the better. This was a Smythe we hadn't seen before. Or at least a Smythe I hadn't seen. My earlier impression was a man who chad a director-of-the-board mentality and wasn't ever about to live it down.

The misconception could have been fostered by the emergence of his son Stafford Smythe as the great white chief of the Maple Leaf Cashbox.

Staff comes across as stuffed-with his own importance and arrogance. He's probably a nice enough fellow as long as you say, "sir." If you don't, don't let him get behind you near the edge of the bridge.

Conny obviously has his likes and hates, but he projected himself as a man who doesn't talk out of the side of his mouth His retrospective views on homo sapiens, then and now, were remarkably sharp.

"When we decided to build the Gardens, we started a campaign to talk it up . . . 'Gotta have an arena.' Everybody was saying it even though some of them didn't know what it

'Then the man put a 'two' in front of the '14' and it did something for every $20 ticket in my pocket.'

It did something, alright. Something like $15,000 for Conny's wealth. That's how he purchased King Clancy. The camera swung to the Toronto dressing room. It passed by lockers marked "Sawchuk" and "Shack."

Either the film was shot before those two were shipped out in the National Hockey League draft or the Gardens mointenance man is a little slow at his work. (I wonder, after Leafs' third straight loss, if Punch Imlach wouldn't like to have

Naturally Conny discussed players of his era . deceased Bill Barilko, Syl Apps, Max Bentley, Nick Metzthe four greatest players ever on this ice"-Thomson, Mortson and Stanowski

Since Smythe's credo was "if you can't lick them on the street you can't beat them on the ice" it wasn't surprising to hear him talk almost reverently about Barilko and Bill Ezinicki. (I kept waiting for him to mention Red Horner who could pitchfork with anybody, but no).

Smythe's citations for them wouldn't have found favor with the PTA . . . "I remember Bill Barilko hitting Sid Abel so hard he went to hospital with pneumonia." "Ezinicki was one of the finest athletes I ever saw. He put Edgar Laprade in hospital for four months." An affinity for assault hardly seems the basis on which to judge a player's credentials for greatness. J. C. Tremblay, Pierre Pilote and Tim Horton can make your teeth spill like chicklets; they can do other things as well.

Some days it wasn't always Stanley Cups on the mantlepiece and money flowing through the Cashbox.

He told of operating a gravel business. His wife did the accounting. They were to supply gravel to a church. The truck driver, not too well educated, kept taking the material to the wrong church.

"The trouble was," Conny was saying "that there were churches in the district: Holy Christ Church, The Church of Christ and another with Christ in there someplace. "Every time we sent the driver out, he'd go to the wrong church. That cost us money and we gave it too him pretty

"Finally he got us on the phone and said 'For Christ's sake, which one is it?""

"'Forget it and come home,' I told him. That was one time Conny Smythe knew when he was licked and got out."

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

The Royal Canadian Golf Association's adopted rules recently approved Association and the Royal and Ancient, will go into effect Jan.

Noteworthy revisions involve the addition of the continuous putting rule and the banning of so-called croquet-putting style.

Starting Jan. 1, a player will be permitted to lift and clean his ball only prior to his first putt and, in stroke play, he will be required to putt continuously until holing out.

Purpose of the "one clean" and continuous putting rules is to speed play. These rules have been employed successfully 1966 and 1967 USGA competitions (as well as in the PGA championship and at the Masters.

On the putting green, a player will not be permitted to make a stroke from astride, or with either foot touching, the line of putt or an extension of that line behind the ball.

Rules changes with respect to club shafts becoming effective Jan. 1 provide that they must be designed to be straight from the top to a point not more than five inches above the sole and that any neck or socket shall not be more than five inches long. A club must not be designed to be adjustable and the shaft in cross-section must be generally circular or, in a putter, otherwise symmetrical. To obviate the croquet-type putter, it will be required that "the axis of the putter shaft must diverge from the vertical by at least 10

The rule affecting putters and putting stances was made to prevent golf from being modified into another kind of game a variety of putting styles and clubs.

Another amendment provides that there will no longer be a two-stroke penalty if a ball played from off the putting green within 20 yards of the hole (including a hazard) strikes a fellow competitor's ball lying on the green. The penalty will apply only when both balls are on the green before the stroke. This also will speed play and eliminate the last requirement for measurement of "within 20 yards of the hole."

Dominic Mirandi, the official PGA scorekeeper, has been after Billy Casper to put him on his payroll . . . to stay away

Mirandi missed only two tournaments during the entire 1966 season - the U.S. Open and the Western Open. Casper won both, back-to-back!

In 1967, Mirandi again has missed only two tournaments. That's right ... the Canadian Open and the World Open, both of which Casper won!

One of the least noticed statistics of professional golf is the little item called "in-the-money finishes." When you boil it right down, that is about all that counts, really. But the statistic deals with consecutive in-the-money finishes and it doesn't get much general attention, even though it perhaps is the most decisive yardstick for measuring a player's performance. For instance, when Casper finished 59th in the recent Westchester Classic, he failed to make a cheque for the first time in 100 tournaments (excluding the 1965 Seattle Open and the 1966 Cleveland Open-where he withdrew because of illness

That is a rather phenomenal record . . . 100 tournaments without missing the cut and, additionally, making money in all Casper's total winnings in the 100 tournaments was $380,731,74, and he won 12 championships, including the U.S. Open. He finished in the top 10 in 66 of those tournaments, too!

Prior to Westchester, the last time Casper missed a cut and failed to make money was at the 1964 Phoenix Open, where he missed the 54-hole cut. His worst finishes in that stretch of 100 events was a tie for 52nd at the Colonial Invitation this year and a tie for 43rd at Pensacola in 1964.

Of course, that string also helped make him the 1966 leading money winner, the Vardon Trophy winner last year and also the "Player-of-the-Year."

But missing the money at Westchester didn't bother Billy a bit . . . he simply went out and won the World Open the next week for $35,000, the biggest cheque of his career!

PROGRESS GETS BUCKS BUT DECIMATES DUCKS

hat's why the British Columbia Waterfowl Society wants $100,000 to improve its 800-acre bird sanctuary in this Fraser

Valley municipality. Robert Harris, an official of the federal wildlife service, said the waterfowl society has received grants totalling $75,000 since the sanctuary was founded several years ago. "We are trying to build up the sanetuary to protect North American waterfowl from progress and the encroachments of industry," said Harris, a society director.

"But to do everything we would like to do, we could use another $100,000," he said. Harris said his society plans to launch a fund-raising campaign in a few months.

The sanctuary, opened in 1964 following an extensive survey of Fraser Delta nesting grounds, has since been stocked with snow geese, three types of Canada geese, trumpeter swans and several types of ducks.

GUN NOT GOOD IDEA WHEN HUNTING GIRL

DUNCAN — Pointing a loaded firearm cost Baden Thomas Tuck, 23, of Lake Cowichan, a $30 fine here Monday.

Tuck pleaded guilty and Cpl. William Baillie, RCMP, said accused apparently went looking for his girl friend Saturday night and ended up in an argument at an apartment party.

He was swinging around in the room pointing a shotgun at everyone present, court was told.

By ROBERT H. ESTABROOK

UNITED NATIONS - A nation seeking nuclear weapons could acquire a modest capacity in them for $170 million annually over a 10-year period, an international panel of scientific experts concluded in a United Nations report released Monday night.

Such a sum would pay for 30 to acquire small but highto 50 jet bombers and 50 medium-range missiles along with 100 plutonium warheads.

The American mission to the UN welcomed the report and found encouragement in the fact that a dozen experts came up with unanimous conclusions. Other missions expressed the belief that the report would drive home an awareness of nuclear effects in a way that previous studies had not done.

Existing nuclear powers are the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China. No Chinese figures are included in the report.

"Any new country which embarked on the production of nuclear weapons would soon find that it had entered a new arms race without having provided itself with the option of abandoning the old," it stated.

Such a race "demands immense technological and other resources and, of itself, creates conditions under—which the economic progress of a nation could stagnate."

According to the report the United States planned to spend $8.4 billion on its nuclear forces in 1967, or 12.1 per cent of its gross national product. There were no comnarable figures for the Soviet Union.

The experts also took issue with the widely-held thesis that tactical nuclear weapons could be employed for defensive purposes without massive damage. It estimated that 400 such bombs would be used in an exchange be tween nuclear powers.

'Minispies' Latest Bugging Equipment

BONN (UPI)-West German private eyes are going back to detecting like Sherlock Holmes.

Otherwise they face prosecution since modern eavesdropping aids were outlawed recently in West Germany.

German technicians had developed a whole arsenal of sophisticated bugging devices and imported more from Japan, Switzerland, the United States and other countries "Want to hear and learn things when and where you want? Our minimicrophone, small as a sugar lump, can be concealed anywhere," the ads of one West German firm proclaimed. An estimated 10,000 of the electronic sugar-cube bugs were sold before the legislators clamped down.

Tiepin and ballpoint pen bugs were becoming best sellers among private detectives and businessmen. The bugs were called "minispies." The growing use of bugging was brought to the attention of deputies in parliament by husbands complaining they had been blackmailed in divorce cases. Parliament decided to act quickly and close a loophole in the law.

Under a law dating back to 1928, a permit was required for using the devices. But people could still buy them.

Now it is an offence even to possess a bugging device, punishable by six months jail or a fine. The law also covers unauthorized recording of private conversations and passing the material on to a third party.

Before approving the bill unanimously, parliament heard accounts of the wide use of bugging methods in the U.S.

The West German government was well aware of the effectiveness of "minispies."

On one occasion it gave a demonstration with a micro-phone-transmitter in a match box, relaying a conversation without wires to a tape recorder several rooms away.

The only West Germans allowed to use electronic bugs are the authorities themselves. The Office for the Protection of the Constitution, the West German counter-intelligence organization, is specifically, authorized to use "minispies" to catch man-size spies,

'SASQUATCH' CAPTURED ON FILM

It's a Hairy-Chested Female!

B.C.'s Sasquatch-seekers are eagerly awaiting a private preview of an amateur movie film which could astound the country.

Don Abbott, provincial government anthropologist here, today confirmed that a special screening of a film purporting to show one of the legendary monsters will be shown Thursday to a number of scientists at the University of B.C. for evaluation.

The Sasquatch is supposed to be a female with large breasts visible through the heavy covering of body hair. It also appears to be sever pounds.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

killers in Canada.'

The statement came as a shock during CBC-TV's hour-long documentary special Sunday, "Air of Death."

The program dealt with air pollution, a problem which must be tackled now at all levels or sick and we'll die." In fact, according to one authority interviewed, if nothing is done, by the year 2,000 we'll be in real trouble.

Examples of air pollution were cited throughout the program with the most striking the town of Dunville, Ont., where polluted air has resulted in crop loss, cattle herds affected by swollen joints and falling teeth and even humans beginning to suffer arthritic conditions attributed to the poisoned air.

Who has to have the responsibility to deal with it? No satisfactory, answer was given but viewers were witness to a perfect example of politicial buckpassing. An Ontario provincial government authority claimed it was the federal government which has to have responsibility.
"If the federal government isn't going to take the responsibility for administering the law as it refers to interprovincial boundaries then they must delegate the responsibility to the provinces."

"The federal government has not the jurisdiction to deal with the problems of air pollution in Canada," replied Health Minister Allan J. MacEachen. "The ovincial government under the constitution occupy and have the authority to cope with this problem. He said the federal government has no specific new proposals to make nor does it have fresh plans for resentation to the provinces. Authorities will bicker till the cows come home. The documentary evidence presented showed the seriousness of the problem. If elected officials and industry fail to cope with it then the New York example should be instituted, public protest through citizen involvement to get the ball rolling.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The crowded every day.

Each day more people board more airliners, more are taking flying lessons, more airplanes are winging

From 1967, passenger on commercial air liners will total 128 million. Ten years from now, the U.S. Federal Aviation Agency estimillion passengers-nearly three times the present number. A Senate committee heard testimony that the figure may even be 450

The growth in non-airline The growth in non-arrine, non-military flying will be just as spectacular. In 1965 manufacturers of civil aircraft produced 12,646 planes. The figure in 1966 was 16,404—valued at more than $2 billion.

A forecast of 104,000 nonairline, non-military planes in 1967 is sure to be exceeded. By 1977, that total is expected be 180,000 and will include 8,000 turbine aircraft, compared with 950 this year.

In the next three years the jumbos—airliners that nearly 500 passengers Despite the increased seating space on the jumbos, the forecast is that airliners will increase from this year's 2,337 to 2,875 in 1972 and 3,500 in

All this has caused mounting concern for ground facili-ties to handle them, safety facilities to guide them, air-ports to land them.

The FAA has ordered a sweeping revision of air safety rules-including easier access to exits, better evacua tion procedures, and improved marking and lighting of exits-aimed at saving more lives in airline crashes. The new rules are expected to cost the airlines and manufac-turers almost $2 billion in the next few years, but passen-gers are expected to pay most of the cost. Airport development costs are expected to run $6 billion in the next 10 years. President Johnson has called for a broad new program to cope with the rising air traffic. He has suggested a plan that would spend an estimated $5 billion for new facilities, equipment and additional per-sonnel and said he would ask the airlines, passengers and nmunities to share the cost

Crisis Point

Even without any increase flying is at a crisis point. There is mounting clamor to bar private planes from busy commercial airports they have the same privileges as the big airline jets. But airports are paid for by all citizens and the air is free and some sort of compromise must be reached.

O'Hare Airport in Chicago the nation's busiest, had 478,-644 takeoffs and landings last year by airliners-an average of 64 each hour. And it had 78,124 general aviation craft landing and taking off-an average of nine each hour.

John F. Kennedy Interna-tional in New York had 390.898 takeoffs and landings last year, an average of 45 an

What kind of mineral is agate?

Every young collector has a yen for agate specimens. Their rainbow colors and waxy lustre add eye-catching decor to his display. But chances are he would miss a treasured agate on a field trip. This is because its beauty usually is packaged inside a drab, crusty wrapping.

Agates are rated as semiprecious stones but agate is a form of the earth's most plentiful mineral. It is a silicate in which the basic molecule is a package of one atom of silicon and two of oxygen. Under different conditions, these molecules of silicon dioxide arrange themselves in different crystal-line structures. In the cooling process of molten lave they tend to form lattices of glassy crystals. But silicates also form from deposits in cool, slowseeping ground water. their molecules tend to arrange themselves in long threads, and the final mineral is not packed in the lattice form of a true

Most agate is made in this second way. It shares its silicate classification with common quartz and a long list of mon quartz and a long list of other stony compounds made mostly from silicon dioxide. Pure quartz is milky white or glassy clear but most of its forms are colored with traces of impurities. The pure form in the agate family is chalcedony, a milky white mineral with an inner translucent moonglow. inner translucent moonglow.
With several more colorful LONDON (AP) — Christie's cousins, it is classified as a cryptocrystalline quartz. The term cryptocrystalline is used to Nov. 29 a series of letters Ernest for minerals that contain buried microscopic crystals and in this group the tiny quartz crystals are arranged in threads that tend to form layers.

Most agates are the children of seeping ground'water. This water tends to gather loads of silica fragments because this mineral is so plentiful. It also gathers calcium and sodium, poisssium and aluminum and a land some in his cum hand water to be auctioned since his death in The 65 letters, some typed gathers calcium and sodium, potassium and aluminum and a variety of other minerals that add character to the basic silica ingredient. The process of forming agate is long and slow. Ground water laden with loads of silica and usually other minerals becomes trapped in The war wears had desired. of silica and usually other minerals becomes trapped in rocky pores and pockets. These spongy spores may be gaseous bubbles formed in ancient lavas or pockets and crevices in heavy, dark basalt.

The letters, written from settle and arrange themselves in smooth flat layers, perhaps around the walls of a sealed cavity. The climate and surrounding soils may change, causing the seeping water to deposit other minerals with the tasic silica ingredient. These impurities add layers of assorted colors to the patiently growing agate. Its layers of basic white become separated with layers of blues, pearly with layers of blues, pearly greys, and assortments of browns from earthy olive to rusty red. At last the rocky pocket is stuffed full with rainbow ribbons of agate. It is called a concretion. Other pockets of agate form in rocky veins and crevices. If the surrounding bedrock erodes away, our hard agate concretion is freed to join the pebbles on the ground, But a rock hunter may pass it by because the rainbow inside it is encrusted with drab bedrock. Its colorful ribbons are revealed only when the nodule is sawn apart. They may be arranged in straight or wavy lines or perfect circles. When dark fragments of manganese penetrate ferny cracks in milky chalcedony they form a surprising mineral called moss agate.

Silica minerals are hard enough to be ground into emery and other useful abrasives. However, the various ages are rated as semi-precious stones and too valuable to work at cleaning and polishing at cleaning and polishing chores. They themselves are cut and polished to a waxy lustre and used to make jewelry or merely displayed for their ribbons of rainbow beauty. No two agates are exactly alike because the patient history and the secret building of each sample; a different sample is different.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: When we moved from a big suburban home into a high-rise city apartment, friends said Patsy and Pogo, our dog and cat respectively, wouldn't be able to stand it. They even be able to stand it. They even had the gall to say we should give our babies to "a good home!" Well, to make a long story short, they have though their only outings are on a porch not much bigger on a portch not much bigger than a door mat. My question concerns the matter of distemper shots for these two.
We feel that because they are so completely isolated they will no longer be exposed, so we can forego the booster

DEAR F.W.: Unfortunately, no. Boosters are more neces-sary now than ever. Immunity to distemper virus (Whether canine or feline) tends to remain at a high level if body defences are stimulated by occasional contact with these viruses. If there is no exposure to the virus, the agriculture department.

Buying Hikes Egg Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal purchases of eggs this summer drove the price up eight cents a dozen, offsetting the effects of a record market volume, says the agriculture department.

An announcement from its agricultural stabilization board said the national average Grade

An C To A price to producers was 36.7 cents a dozen for the support year ending Sept. 30.

This meant no subsidy to producers under the 1966-67 program which provided a floor price of 34 cents a dozen for producers in the 1,000-10,000 dozen range. The board said prices were high in the first quarter of the support year, from October to December, 1966. However, a record volume of eggs resulted in lower prices in 1967.

In July, the board was authorized to buy eggs to stabilize

"The program had an immediate strengthening effect on the egg market with a resulting price rise of about eight cents a dozen," the announcement said.

Restriction On Loans Draws Sharp Criticism

VANCOUVER (C.P)-A brewery representative has criticized the ban on federal government loans to businesses whose major revenue comes from beer and liquor sales.

W. R. Foster, director of public relations for Canadian Breweries Ltd., told the annual Breweries Ltd., told the annual convention of the B.C. Hotels' Association that he considers the unwritten policy of the Industrial Development Bank to be an oversight.

He said it is "a little ridiculous to exclude as a credit risk" an operation for selling alcoholic everages.

Austin has this wild new transmission... automatic and stick shift, both in the same car!

You can sport around town with four-on-the floor. Or go with the cool of automatic. The Austin 1100 is like getting two cars for the price of one. And what swings more than that?

Austin comes on big with a lot more too. Front-wheel drive for barefoot traction. Fluid-filled Hydrolastic suspension to wash out the bumps. And sideways-mounted engine, giving you room enough for family fun by the carload. Austin was born to swing-and you'll swing a real deal at your nearby Austin dealer.

GM Recalls 1 Million Chevrolets

DETROIT (AP) - Chevrolet division of General Motors is re-calling more than 1,000.000 standard-sized 1965 Chevrolets to replace a potentially defective part of the car's steering apparatus.

Chevrolet said only four such cases had been found but that 1,143,000 cars built between September, 1964, and May, 1965, would be recalled to have the steering idler arm assembly re placed.

"The decision to replace the parts, without cost to the owners, was reached after some studies revealed that after extended mileage the original as-sembly in some cases may sep-arate and result in a severe pull to the right when the brakes are applied at low to moderate car speed," a Chevrolet spokesr said.

Owners of 1965 Chevrolets involved, whether the cars were purchased new or used, will be notified by certified letter to take their vehicles to their and replacement of the parts.

Chevrolet said all the cars were beyond the General Motors warranty plan of 24 months or 24,000 miles but that the program would be carried out as part of GM's "long established policy of assuring the integrity

The spokesman said the po tentially defective part is at the base of the steering column.

In December?

SAIGON (AP) - The United States is considering a major pause in the bombing of North Vietnam this winter to test Hanoi's willingness to start peace talks, a U.S. diplomat said today.

There is scant hope among diplomats here that even a prolonged halt in the bombing will induce North Vietnam to sit down and work out any settlement that Saigon and Washington would accept.

But because of heavy foreign pressure for a pause Washington might order one in an attempt to show that the United States is eager for but that Hanoi is unwilling to settle for any thing less than U.S. capitulation.

The prolonged bombing pause, if one is decided upon, probably would begin in December with the traditional Christmas truce. Another ceasefire is ordered for New Year's and a third in January year celebration.

Earnings Jump

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. had net earnings of $68,800,000 or $2.15 a share in the first nine months of this year, compared with $66,000,000 or $2.15 a share in the first nine months of this year, compared with $66,000,000 or $2.08 in the similar 1966 period.

Announcing the figures, president W. A. Twaits said the improved earnings resulted from higher sales, partly offset by rising labor and other costs.

In oilseeds today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange with most other markets showing firm-lecord to bus eggs resulted in lower prices in 1967.

In July, the board was authorized to buy eggs to stabilize prices.

"The program had an immediate strengthening effect on the egg market with a resulting price rise of about eight cents a dozen," the announcement said.

CANADA PERMANENT TRUST CO. P.O. Box 1232, Victoria, B.C. By: HALLATT, STEWART & CO.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The skies are getting more crowded every day.

Each day more people board more airliners, more are taking flying lessons, more airplanes are winging

From 1967, passenger traffic on commercial air-liners will total 128 million Ten years from now, the U.S. Federal Aviation Agency esti there will be 352 million passengers—nearly three times the present number. A Senate committee heard testimony that the may even be 450

The growth in non-airline non-military flying will be just as spectacular. In 1965 manu-facturers of civil aircraft produced 12,646 planes. The figure in 1966 was 16,404 valued at more than $2 billion.

A forecast of 104,000 non-airline, non-military planes in 1967 is sure to be exceeded. By 1977, that total is expected to be 180,000 and will include 8,000 turbine aircraft, compared with 950 this year.

In the next three years the first jumbos—airliners that carry nearly 500 passengers take to the skies. Despite the increased seating space on the jumbos, the forecast is that airliners will increase from this year's 2,337 to 2,875 in 1972 and 3,500 in ing concern for ground facili-ties to handle them, safety facilities to guide them, airports to land them.

The FAA has ordered sweeping revision of air safety rules—including easier access to exits, better evacuation procedures, and improved marking and lighting of exits—aimed at saving more lives in airline crashes. The new rules are expected to cost the airlines and manufac-turers almost $2 billion in the next few years, but passen-gers are expected to pay most of the cost.

Airport development costs are expected to run $6 billion in the next 10 years. President Johnson has called for a broad new program to cope with the rising air traffic. He has suggested a plan that would spend an estimated $5 billion for new facilities, equipment and additional personnel and said he would ask the airlines, passengers and communities to share the cost of the program.

Crisis Point

Even without any increase, flying is at a crisis point. There is mounting clamor to bar private planes from busy mercial airports where they have the same privileges as the big airline jets. But airports are paid for by all citizens and the air is free and some sort of compromise must be reached.

O'Hare Airport in Chicago the nation's busiest, had 478, 644 takeoffs and landings last year by airliners—an averag of 64 each hour. And it had 78,124 general aviation craft landing and taking off—an average of nine each hour.

John F. Kennedy Interna tional in New York had 390.898 takeoffs and landings last year, an average of 45 an

SEVENTH RACE - $3000, claiming ($4000), three-year-olds and up, six fur-In all, 17 airports had more than 100,000 airline takeoffs and landings last year. They were in order, O'Hare, Ken-nedy, Los Angeles, San Franciseo, Atlanta, Washington, Ntional, Dallas Love Field, Miami, Newark, La Guardia (N.Y.), Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit Wayne, Cleveland Hopkins, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Denver. Others in the top 25 are Kansas City Municipal, Honolulu, Houston, Minneapolis-St. Paul, New Orleans, Covington (Cincinnati), Baltimore International and San Juan (Puerto Rico) International. The busiest airport in the country in total operations, behind Chicago's O'Hare, is Opa Locka, Fla. The airport, near Miami, handled 546,985 general aviation aircraft last year, an average of 62 an hour. It had virtually no airline traffic, however. Sailor Won't Borrow Another Battery for Car

University of Victoria has its first resident geneticists. Dr. E. Derek Styles and Mrs. Styles are both specialists in genetics. Dr. Styles is a w assistant professor in the biology department of the University of Victoria. Mrs. Styles is kept busy with two small children. They met when they were doing graduate work at the University of Wisconsin. Dr. Styles did his undergraduate work at UBC, Mrs. Styles at the University of Damascus in Syria.

What is a geneticist? "It's a scientist who explores organisms to find the modes of inheritance," says Mrs. Styles. Each normal body cell has 46 chromosones that contain genes which determine an individual's characteristics—the color of their hair, their ability to see. The sex cells contain only 23 chromosones so when a child is born, half of its genetic make-up comes from its mother and half from its father.

"This gene inheritance is subject to some manipulation but very little is known about it," Dr. Styles says. "The geneticist should not take part now in shaping society—it is too dangerous.

"Hitler tried to create a society of supermen by selective breeding. It's a frightening idea that one person or a group could have this power.' COUNSELLING ROLE

Dr. Styles sees the primary role of the geneticist as a counselling one. When there is a hereditary disease in a families' pedigree the prospective parents could get risk statistics from genetic coun sellors. Unfortunately the only cities in Canada offering this service are Winnipeg, ronto, Montreal and Ed-balanced against the danger.' WHOSE DECISION? Should geneticists advocate that such people, with men-tally defectives and inherited disease carriers be prevented from breeding?

"I think the decision must be both the individuals and society's but I don't feel that any one class of society should have the power to decide—we are all of us defective in some way. "If we did make such a decision, it would not prevent mutations from occurring. Inherited mutations are only a small segment. 'We have evolved through a series of favorable mutations, If we were to try and prevent all mutations, no favorable growth would be possible. "Man must keep up with his e v er-changing environment. Favorable mutations are ones that enable us to adapt to the changes in our world. Without them, we would run the risk of becoming extinct."
